RESEARCH*Weekly report 1 – 3rd of January 2020*

A week with a large number of notifications of poor quality – most alerts got grades of 60 % or lower. A fairly short week, which is maybe expected for the first report of the year. Children's clothing is the single most prominent type of product this week, but it is composed of mostly electronics and toys.

Weekly report 2 – 10th January 2020

This week was dominated by cosmetic products, all from Norway. These cosmetic products alerts were overall of high quality and examples of some of the best alerts on RAPEX this year. Despite this, they are still lacking in comparison with the American dangerous product notification system in the way that it is still a lot harder for consumers to find the products that are listed or to find a recall website.

Weekly Report 3 – 17th January 2020

Quite a large number of notifications this week, with a significant number coming from Poland. Most products were toys and other child-related products. Fireworks from Belgium got 100/100 but there were some alerts with 50/100 gradings. Three self-balancing scooters were featured in the report but two were in the ‘Serious alerts’ section and one in the ‘other alerts’ section with no obvious reason behind this distinction.

Weekly report 10 – 6th March 2020

A fairly average week with most product scoring between 60 and 80/100. Toys were by far the most prevalent this week. No protective masks. This plastic toy is the only product to even have webpages for company recalls, highlighting the lack of links to relevant web pages in RAPEX compared to the Australian and American Product Safety surveillance websites.

Weekly report 13 – 27th March 2020

A weekly report with many 90/100s, particularly high number of good quality notifications. Varied – no product stood out. Not a single mask, however despite COVID-19. Germany had many low scores by forgetting brand or product name. Interestingly, there was a post about women's shoes sold by Primark that were real. It seems to me to be a rare example of a recognizable (and not counterfeit) name being put up on RAPEX.

Weekly report 14 – 3rd April 2020

The majority of reports this week were jewellery products submitted by Luxembourg and children's clothing submitted by Greece. Luxembourg received bad grades because the majority of reports provided neither product nor brand names. Although the pandemic was already spreading in Europe, there were no reports on subpar face masks. Well done reports came from both Eastern and Western Europe.

Weekly Report 15 – 10th April 2020

Toys dominated this report but notifications for pieces of jewellery made up about a third and were generally pretty poor quality, often missing product/brand names. Some of the toys had very detailed descriptions which would potentially make them easier to track down. Several products with 20 out of 20 for required action because of the presence of a link to a company's recall page and two of the USB chargers from Poland scored 100.

Weekly Report 16 – 17th April 2020

With almost of all Europe fully in lockdown, this report from mid-April interestingly does not contain a single COVID-19 related product (masks, disinfectant, UV steriliser lamp, protective coveralls). The most common product type was electrical appliances and devices and the two particularly poor quality notifications were jewellery pieces.

Weekly Report 22 – 29th May 2020

17 of the 47 products were COVID-19 related (masks, coveralls, disinfectant), making them the most common product type. Several notifications scored 10 out of 10 in Recall information category, namely Finnish alerts about spectacle frames providing contact information and a link to a company's website but none of the alerts got full marks.

Weekly Report 24 – 12th June 2020

Another report with a high average grading with the most common product being toys and children's products and interestingly very few COVID-19 related products (only one protective overall, no masks/disinfectant at all). The safety issue explanations for the vehicle lifts were particularly good because of their clarity and detail. An amendment was said to have been made to the notification about a skin lightening product except it is not clear what information was added/adjusted.

Weekly Report 26 – 26th June 2020

Most common products were masks, many of which had been categorised as dangerous because they had not been certified. All the notifications had images and satisfactory safety issue explanations. Overall a report with a high average rating but also features one particularly bad notification for a digital alarm clock with high levels of mercury for which a lot of information is lacking and its withdrawal from the market by the manufacturer was the only measure taken: product recall or at least some sort of contact information for worried consumers who had bought the product before it was removed would surely be needed for such a toxic product.

Weekly Report 27 – 3rd July 2020

I made the observation that alerts from the United Kingdom are very frequently missing important information, such as product and brand name, leading to low scores. Their reports score between 20 and 70. Out of 24 reported products, only two were masks. Personal hygiene products like hair clippers, fake nails or hair dye make up the largest share of reports. Well done reports came from both Eastern and Western Europe.

Weekly Report 28 – 10th July 2020

COVID-19 related products were the most common product type, with masks, hand disinfectant and several UV lamps and sterilisers. Also the notification for a faulty bicycle has a link to a company's website where consumers can get access to more information concerning the recall of the product and provides contact information for them to claim compensation: one of the few products we have so far that has 20 out of 20 for the 'Required action' category. Most of the products were missing model numbers and other descriptive information.

Weekly Report 29 – 17th July 2020

Dominant products were masks and toys (almost all masks were not taken off the market but instead marked with warnings). Several high quality notifications from Western and Eastern European countries. Once again a few examples of notifications of inconsistent quality coming from the same country (eg. France).

Weekly report 30 – 24th July 2020

Dangerous masks, lighting devices and toys dominated the dangerous product list. Most notifications were faulty, with little detailed information about product batch or brand. Interestingly, the notifications came from both new member states (Slovakia, Hungary) and old member states (Belgium for the masks) and they were equally poor.

Weekly report 33 – 14th August 2020

Contrary to previous weeks, COVID-19 related supplies (protective masks, disinfectant) were not the dominant products. Electronics and toys made up the majority of the notifications. Poor quality notifications came from both West and Eastern European countries and quality of the notifications from individual countries was inconsistent, varying from product to product. Most common details missing in reports were serial numbers and adequate information on product recall.
